What's new:

Download Cortex Plus Mod 1.7.1 Hi guys and remember to READ THE BASICS, because the problem I have is I don't have a damn clue what I'm talking about. So, I made a post on here asking if someone would lend me a hand, lol. I didn't even realise the porting would be so involved. Downloado wait just wait lol, and I play movies and Game Boy games. So, here the deal. OK, so, I made a Babylonian "Spade" icon by loading in a pic of my Stag bitch. Now, I also made an icon for Chaos on the website by loading in another pic of my Stag bitch. The problem is they look too similar. How do I separate the two?

----- *Guys you can still have the spades and then put your pics in it. Just load them in the site when there isnt any other ones there. Now you're free to change your icon. Help, we need people to run the test server for us. You can figure out what all the codes, names, etc. are on the boxes here, Give us feedback on the server page. [url= U.S.Pokemon Crossing Team[/url] (test server) is a beta version, available on XP if you use NSIS to install, and on Vista if you DON'T! Follow us on Xbox Live (943.220.2234) to see what we're up to every month! Don't forget the special guest demo lade! for today, it's Rhoa!!! ( yeah, I know its more like ten of em but thats what you get for free), we will likely do Rhoa more often from now on ----- currently trying to port game to both mac and linux, then porting to microsoft windows (Original post by Sn1p-HWb) Yea I will be sure to download it and test it out ----- Hi guys and remember to READ THE BASICS, because the problem I have is I don't have a damn clue what I'm talking about. Q: Is there an "easy" way to unmount NTFS partitions in Ubuntu? In Windows Explorer you can right click a partition, choose "unmount" and it'll tell you if you should first unmount the filesystem on the partition. But in Ubuntu, how do I do the same thing for a partition? A: The easiest way is to open a terminal and use the following command: `sudo umount /mount/point` From Linux's man page: `umount`: Unmount a file system on a removable device. As long as you use `sudo`, your user ID will have permissions to unmount anything. A: Since you already know about `sudo umount /mount/point`, you might as well read about it... The easier way to unmount anything is to press the [Eject] button on the front of your drive. The button is large, (because I have old-fashioned, paper-reinforced high-density floppy disks), and pretty easy to find. It normally sits to the right of the green, USB-based power LED. A: If you're using Ubuntu with the Unity launcher, "open the dash, and type `umount`" If you're using Ubuntu with the Unity launcher, "open the dash, and type `umount`" (you'll get two results - on the left will be "unmount" and on the right will be something like "move". Pick the right one on the right) Q: How do i split a dataframe in list if one element is the same in each list element? If I have a dataframe with column ID, I want to split this in a list if there is only one ID per list element. ID 1 1 1 1
