To be honest, you shouldn't be trying to launch JVM. JVM is to make your JAVA programm. So you don't have to run your JAVA programm, just to make it run. Email "Leaving my job was one of the hardest things I've ever done, but I'm not going anywhere. After leaving, I was unsure of what I was going to do next. It's important to remember you don't have to do this." The official eviction notice came as a surprise. I'd only been in my current job for a few months. My social worker wasn't sure how to do her job in the absence of a person who needed it most. I was just figuring out what it was like to sleep in my home, an apartment that the landlord had made me pay rent to have. After such a long and successful career, I hadn't wanted to leave my job. My boss and the company I worked for had all given me ample opportunity to stay at the job I loved and was thriving in, but my career was my first love. I felt like I needed to do something I loved, not just in order to give myself some more to live for, but because it felt almost disrespectful to leave a career that brought me so much satisfaction and fulfillment so quickly. I needed to help. I was fortunate to have had the support and resources to do whatever it took to stay in my job and make it work. Instead of offering me more responsibility at the company, they made it very clear that they wouldn't offer me a promotion, and instead, offered me another position somewhere else. With my supervisors' support, I was able to find a new job, albeit a slightly lower position than where I'd just left, but now I was free of all of my responsibilities and solely responsible for my own health. I was working from home, as I had during my tenure at my previous job. By the time I moved out, the agency where I was living had decided to place me in a new home. But they still had my furniture and a couple of boxes sitting in my apartment. Though I knew I could afford to pay rent, my social worker decided to make me pay as I moved out. Fortunately, the agency and my new landlord were going to help pay the rent, but I was surprised to find out 0cc13bf012
